SettingSaree Shop, Surat

CharactersPapaji (Father) & Rohan (Son)

DateFebruary 2026

StatusDraft v1.0

Concept Overview

A vibrant saree shop in Surat. The son (Rohan, late 20s) is drowning in paperwork — supplier payments, stock tracking, GST filing, WhatsApp messages from clients. He's stressed, overwhelmed, doing everything alone.

Enter the father (Papaji, late 50s) — wearing bright clothes, dancing, full of energy. He's the opposite of his stressed son. He hands Rohan his phone with the Pucho.ai app installed. One by one, Pucho agents handle everything — auto-replying to suppliers in Gujarati, checking stock, sending payment reminders, preparing GST summaries.

Rohan transforms from stressed to relieved. Father and son walk out together — bonding, smiling. Pucho keeps working in the background.

Core Message

Every Indian MSME owner's daily chaos — suppliers, payments, stock, GST, WhatsApp — can be handled by AI agents. Pucho makes it real, simple, and in your language.

Target Audience

MSME owners and next-gen family business members (25–45 age group), especially in Gujarat, Maharashtra, and Rajasthan. Textile, retail, and trading businesses who rely on WhatsApp, Tally, and spreadsheets.

Scene 2: SECTION HEADER

Location: The Shop — N/A

Scene 3: INT. SAREE SHOP - DAY

Location: Shree Krishna Sarees — Day

VISUAL:

A vibrant saree shop — “SHREE KRISHNA SAREES” painted in gold on the signboard. Rolls of colorful sarees line the walls floor to ceiling. A few customers browse in the background. The shop feels alive but chaotic.

ROHAN (THE SON):

Sitting behind a cluttered wooden desk. He's wearing a formal shirt, sleeves rolled up, specs on. Sweat beads on his forehead. Around him:

- Stacks of GST papers and invoices
- A Tally screen open on an old desktop monitor
- A diary full of handwritten entries and calculations
- Phone buzzing non-stop with WhatsApp messages
- A calculator, pen, and multiple empty chai cups

He picks up one paper, puts it down. Picks up the phone — 14 unread WhatsApp messages from “Rajkot Supplier”, “Transporter Bhai”, “Mehta Retailer”. He sighs deeply. Rubs his eyes.

CUT TO — PHONE SCREEN:

WhatsApp messages popping up one after another:

- “Bhai, mera payment kab aayega?”

- “Stock kitna bacha hai Banarasi ka?”
- “GST filing ka last date kal hai”

Rohan looks overwhelmed. He mutters under his breath:

ROHAN: (frustrated, to himself) “Sab mujhe hi karna hai...”

He moonwalks past a stack of sarees. Adjusts one on the display. Winks at the camera.

ROHAN: (looking up, irritated) "Papa, aap nachte raho... yahan meri halat dekho. Supplier ka payment pending, stock count nahi mila, aur GST filing kal hai."

PAPAJI: (stops dancing, looks at Rohan with a knowing smile) "Beta... itna tension kyun leta hai?"

ROHAN: (snaps) "Kyunki yeh sab koi aur nahi karega!"

Production Notes

Tone & Feel

Warm, funny, relatable. Not preachy. Think Fevicol-meets-CRED energy — Indian humor with a smart product message. The father-son dynamic should feel real, not scripted.

Music

Light Garba or Bollywood remix beat throughout (upbeat, not overpowering). Drops to a softer, wonder-filled track during the phone reveal sequence. Picks back up with energy for the end frame.

Casting Notes

Papaji should feel like a real Gujarati businessman who's embraced tech — not a caricature. Think fun uncle energy. Someone the audience's father reminds them of.

Rohan should feel like every 25–30 year old who joined the family business and is drowning in operations. Relatable, not exaggerated.

Shorter Cuts

30-sec Version Start from Scene 2 (Papaji enters). Quick montage of Pucho screens. End with tagline.

15-sec Reel Just the phone reveal + 2 quick Pucho screens + "Pucho. To Sahi." — works as an Instagram/YouTube teaser.
